The Publishers Association of New York City adopted yesterday the following minute upon the death of Mr. Ridder:

"The Publishers Association of New York City loses, in the death of Herman Ridder, a founder and one of its most loyal and valued members. Few men knew the city of his birth as Mr. Ridder knew New York, and service to his fellow citizens was his ideal and aspiration. To him administration of a great daily newspaper with wide and impartial vison, supporting all that made for citizenship, for understanding between all classes and conditions of men and for the training and development of the ideal American, offered an inviting field in which he worked with steadfast faith and untiring diligence. By merit alone he achieved distinction as a first citizen, leading in every worthy cause and tespected by all.

November 3, 1913. The Finance Committee of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul is sorrow stricken at the death of its fellow member, the late Herman Bidder. It is hard to realize that his dynamic personality is gone and that his compelling ursent advocacy of broad Catholic Vincentian charity is stilled. None knew him. pose behind and in his every act, but to us who were favored with his inti-mate friendship, who met with him frequently to discuss and work out the great problem of helping the poo-and the afflicted the memory of his personality will be enducing, eacret nd inspiring. Many times indeed his personal efforts as a member of this committee brought to the Society the help it sorely needed, and it may herbe recorded for the first time that his personal gift made possible one of the large buildings at Spring Valley, used children of New York. His interest and his sympathics were as broad and as diversified as the activities of our great Commonwealth: Intense in thought and action he came to be looked upon by all his fellow citizens as a leader in every worthy project.
